Shields takes rodeo royalty title

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

For Gillian Shields, winning Miss Rodeo Airdrie last Saturday was a dream come true.

"I was just speechless," she said of hearing the results on the rodeo's last day. "I've been wanting this for a really long time. It's really crazy when things you say you're always going to do — you do them."

Shields, 20, grew up on a farm west of Didsbury and has been involved in rodeo and royalty for years.

"It's just something I've always been interested in,"

she said of the sport. "It's something my mom suggested when I first started riding and I thought, hey, Yeah, let's try this. And it's been amazing."

Shields went up against four other women for the top spot at the pro rodeo that ran June 28 to July 2.

"We'd get up early in the morning and visit sponsors, seniors homes, daycares and a couple of dinners," she said as well as the rodeo events.

"There were 60 to 70 secret judges in the crowd watching you — watching your every move." Months of work went into studying, horsemanship, preparing outfits and her speech. "At the same time you have to be a down-to-earth person who's able to talk to people," she said of the stress that's involved.

But, at the end of the week Shields took the crown and placed first in all three categories: public speaking, written exam and horsemanship.

"It was a great time. It's hard to believe that I'm sitting here and I'm done and I did what I set out to," she said.

Airdrie princess is Rebecca McKay, 23, of Airdrie. The two of them were able to attend the Ponoka Stampede the next day, representing Airdrie and the Airdrie Rodeo. She'll spend the next year promoting the city at various events across the province.

"I couldn't have done this without the support from friends of friends and family. And my horse Flash, she is just amazing — such a cool horse."

Shields was Carstairs Rodeo Queen in 2006, Miss Rodeo Sundre 2007, and a finalist for last year's Calgary Stampede royalty program coming in the top six.

So far everything's gearing her up for her next step: competing for Ms. Rodeo Canada.

"I've wanted Ms. Rodeo Canada for such a long time," she said of her ultimate goal in the royalty circuit.

She's hoping to start in November 2012.

"It's really important to have positive role models and a good representative and things like that," she said of why being rodeo royalty is such a draw for her. "These days our western heritage has been attacked by activists. This is where we came from and I think people need to embrace it and I like to be part of it."

Shields also studies education at Red Deer College and spent the last two months helping out at Ross Ford Elementary. She also barrel races in the FCA when she's not running for royalty.

Harvest Builders denies developer's claims

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

The president of Harvest Builders is denying claims made by a developer involved in a stalled seniors' housing project that is causing flooding issues at Valarosa Crossing.

In a letter to Review publisher Murray Elliott, Darla Carpenter says "the facts are different" from what was implied in an article that appeared last week.

In that article, James Carpenter claimed he owned the property for the planned seniors' housing project and intended to develop it. But James Carpenter said he had not received money from Harvest Builders to proceed.

"Harvest Builders does not own the multi-family land in Valarosa Crossing and has not done the development on the land," Darla Carpenter wrote in the letter.

"James Carpenter or his company have never billed Harvest Builders for any development on this land and no monies are owed to him or any company controlled by him in respect of this development," she wrote.

"Harvest Builders did not hire James Carpenter's company to develop the land. Harvest Builders is the recipient of the government grant to build seniors' affordable housing. Once the land was developed Harvest Builders was under the impression that the land was to be subdivided and a portion sold to Harvest Builders to build upon," she wrote.

"Since the development has not been completed at the time and no land has been sold to Harvest Builders the project has been stalled. We are currently looking at other options."

As for the flooding into basements and yards, residents should expect a resolution soon.

CAO Roy Brown explained in an e-mail that he's heard from James Carpenter last week and he is going to have equipment come in and move some earth so the stormwater will drain properly.

The town public works department will work with the developer to resolve the issue.

Several residents of the subdivision have complained to council about basement and property flooding.

Didsbury steps back from busing plans

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Didsbury FCSS has decided to step away from the Tri Transportation Project aimed at providing shuttle service for people within Didsbury, Cremona and Carstairs. The project started as an idea in February 2010 when FCSS coordinators in Didsbury, Carstairs and Cremona recognized a need for a low cost shuttle service to get people into Calgary for specialty appointments.

"It was a hard decision to make but we had to make it," said Didsbury FCSS director Jolene Leutsch. She said the project had been going on for a long time with no end in sight.

"FCSS technically can't fund transportation but we were trying to find funding for transportation and spending a lot of time applying for other funding (grants). We were taking time away from our jobs we're already doing." She said the decision wasn't made lightly and said, in the end it came down to need.

"We are very fortunate that we have that transportation already with the Lions bus and with senior support; they do transportation as well. We're not necessarily getting the phone calls here that maybe Carstairs has gotten," she said.

The committee includes members of Carstairs and Cremona FCSS workers, Didsbury Mental Health, and the Didsbury Hospital Social Work Program partnered with Rockyview Regional Handibus Society (RRHS) which has offered to provide services into the three areas for the first two years.

The project's budget is $56,500, but the RRHS has given the Carstairs/Cremona initiative the green light to kick off the service with $25,000 in funding — with the expectation that once it starts and the value is seen, the remainder of the funding will roll in. The cause received a donation from Carstairs Community Chest worth $5,228, putting the committee $9,772 away from its goal.

Lifestyle pilot project successful in first months

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

In the first three months of a pilot weight-loss program a group of 100 members has lost a total of 1,000 pounds.

People from all over the area have signed up from Sundre, Olds, Crossfield, Trochu and Didsbury.

"I've always been on a diet," said Susan Duggan, one of the participants who signed up for the program back in March. "I'm going to turn 60 years old and I thought — you know, this is ridiculous. I've done Weight Watchers and different programs where they tell you to diet. ... never, ever has it been taught this way."

She said she's tried various diets since the '70s, and they all turned out the same way — they didn't. "They were roller-coaster diets."

So far in the program, she's lost 25 pounds and 15 inches. She credits it to the balance of the program that incorporates mental and physical approaches with a focus on nutrition.

"Sometimes people in rural areas don't have access to all the resources you find in a city," said Enid Martin, social worker with Alberta Health Services and one of the creators of the pilot project along with RN Penny Farley.

In January, Martin put the call out for interested participants to sign up for a pilot lifestyle change program, targeted at residents who were at least 60 lbs overweight and who had tried every program.

The project is fully funded by the Highland Primary Care Network a joint venture between Alberta Health Services and family physicians in the Airdrie, Crossfield, Carstairs and Didsbury area.

"We wanted people who would commit to making a lifestyle change that involved healthy eating via the Canada Food Guide, regular exercise of at least three times a week and who wanted emotional support as the discovered the reasons for emotional eating — psycho-social reasons," she said.

She was expecting 50 to 60 people. Instead, over 200 people asked to join. Since then, the group was brought down to 100 people.

The program has the group divided into groups. One group keeps a daily food journal, works out three times a week and meets with a nurse and social worker with Alberta Health Services twice a month. A dietician gives nutritional information. The second group is not monitored as closely but they exercise and keep a food journal. They meet once a month.

"The support at the gym is amazing," said Leone Regner, who said going to the gym is required three times a week. "If someone is there and they're doing something they're struggling with, it'll go quiet. And then everyone will start cheering. The rest of the gym probably thinks we're crazy, but it's a fun place to be," she said of the support that's kept her going.

Duggan agrees. Starting the pilot project was the first time she's ever stepped into a gym.

"You don't feel judged, you feel part of the team."

"There are no barriers," said Martin, who said everything is in place for them to succeed. "The only barriers is themselves."

She said "hitting the wall," does happen and trying to get people to figure out what has gotten them to their weight needs to be discovered before a person can move on. "Oftentimes those factors that cause a person to fail could be depression, anxiety, the fear of succeeding, or family or friends who sabotage."

"If we looked at obesity the issues of hypertension diabetes and joint pain would likely look after themselves," said Didsbury nurse Penny Farley.

The pilot project will run for a full year. Martin said people interested should still call to have their names put on a list in case it's something they get funding to continue into the future.

Competition was a piece of cake for Pearson

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

It was all hoots and hollers in the Pearson household last week when they heard the news that Laurie had won the Women of Philadelphia contest.

"They were thrilled," said Laurie Pearson of her children and husband's response when she called from Toronto last week to break the news. "I called them just after the announcement was made and there was a great deal of screaming and hooting and hollering," she said.

Pearson, stay-at-home mother of 10, was in Toronto last week competing for a spot to host the online Women of Philadelphia website. She was competing against 15 other women and was one of four chosen to host the site, which offers recipes using cream cheese, for the next six months.

Pearson's expertise is with desserts and she will stream videos from Didsbury. She spent part of last week in the Kraft studio in Toronto, filming a few videos on set. The rest she'll do at home and upload to the website.

"I was somewhat stunned at the reality of it all and it doesn't quite sink in all that quickly," she said of winning. "The realization of hearing your name and then realizing you have to stand up and go get your flowers—it took a long time to process in my head. But it was just really exciting and quite an honour to stand up with Anna Olson as she congratulated me."

Olson, celebrity pastry chef, ran the website prior to the competition. In April, women from all over Canada were asked to submit their homemade recipes that used Philadelphia Cream Cheese. Each week a different theme was offered: appetizer, side dish, entrée and dessert. Two finalists were chosen each week before the contest ran again, collecting four competitors for each meal.

"The competition was fantastic. I mean, they got together 16 of the most amazing women across Canada and brought us all together. It felt like summer camp for a bunch of women who love to cook. We had a really good few days getting to know each other," she said.

To view Pearson's videos, check out womenofphiladelphia.ca. Pearson said a new round of competition will start again for other people who might be interested.

Laurie Pearson accepts her award from celebrity chef Anna Olson in Toronto last week. Pearson won as the top dessert chef for the Women of Philadelphia contest and will be one of four online hosts.

Health system peace vital for Alberta

DAN SINGLETON

The findings of a new survey into the workload of Canada's physicians highlights the need for Alberta's health system to keep up with changing times.

The recently released 2010 National Physician Survey (NPS), conducted by the Canadian Medical Association, found that physicians in all provinces are facing increasingly complex care situations and are spending more and more time managing chronic care patients.

Additional administrative work, an aging population and growing patient expectations are all adding to the burden on physicians, the survey found.

The 12,000-physician poll also found that physicians continue to work significantly longer than the traditional hour week, with an average work week lasting 51.4 hours, including 32.7 hours spent in direct patient care.

Along with nurses and other front-line health workers, physicians are, of course, a key component of Alberta's health system. As such, ensuring that the province's doctors are able to continue to do their vital jobs is obviously in the interest of all Albertans.

Unfortunately, the province's doctors and the Stelmach government may now be on a collision course in the run-up to the next provincial election.

Last week the Alberta Medical Association, which represents more than 6,000 Alberta doctors, and the province announced that they had failed to finalize a new agreement.

"It is with some deep degree of disappointment that I inform you that we were unable to reach a new agreement," said Health Minister Gene Zwozdesky.

The AMA's board of directors had earlier unanimously rejected a proposal to extend a three-month agreement in principle. That agreement was intended to be the basis of a new agreement to replace the past eight-year agreement that expired at the end of March.

In a letter to members, AMA president Dr. P.J. White reportedly said the parties have been unable to agree on, among other things, decision-making powers and on proposals related to access, quality and productivity.

Although negotiations between the sides are expected to continue, the fact that a vital part of the health system (i.e.: physician-government agreement) is in disarray is anything but happy news for ordinary Albertans.

Over the next months, in the run-up to the next provincial election, which could come in 2012, the province and Alberta's doctors will hopefully sort out their differences.

However, if they fail to do so, not only will health-care controversy certainly be the number one election campaign issue, but families, seniors and others will be left on pins and needles wondering whether big trouble is just around the corner for Alberta's vital health system.

Letters to the editor

Build houses elsewhere – leave the Butte alone

Dear Editor,

I was very disturbed when I heard that there was a move afoot to build condos on the Butte in Didsbury. That Butte distinguishes Didsbury from every town along the line. It was here when the first settlers came from Kitchener, Ontario to settle in the area in the 1800s.

The history of the town is wrapped around the Butte. The Didsbury racetrack was situated there, with a judges and starter stand. Local businessmen, Jim Caithness, who owned Caithness Cartage and Dave Sinclair, who owned the blacksmith shop, raced their trotters or pacers in sulkies there. On Didsbury fair days they were joined by others who raced horses. The Gillries from Michichi and Morin were regulars and they eventually moved to Didsbury and farmed north of town. Ken Gillrie, who lives in Olds, remembers racing his horse Laddie in the flat races as they were called, when he was 15 years of age.

The sheds for cattle, horses and calf clubs, plus a show ring were set up towards the north end of the Butte, and the ladies had the south side to show off their quilts (hand-made), needlework and culinary expertise with an art show for students. I won first prize for a picture I had drawn when I was 15. The centre area was kept clear and was used to have local groups put on entertainment.

The first memorial to the men of the First World War was built on the top of the Butte. The cairn was built of large rocks by Hughie Roberts, who was a stonemason in Wales before coming to Didsbury. He farmed east of town. Four cairns have been built in Didsbury and have moved from pillar to post over the years, but that is a story of its own.

The high school reunion congregated at the Butte; the Class of 1970 was here in June of this year. Let the town fathers use the old high school land to build their condos on and leave the Butte to the golfers.

Tribute to the staff of Aspen Ridge Lodge

When word came of an impending tornado touchdown in our area, the staff of our Lodge went into action and after just 40 minutes had all our residents safely on the lower floor.

They immediately called the roll, making sure no residents were left in their rooms.

The LPNs and staff were equipped with adequate seating, fans, fresh ice water, fruit and fruit juice and necessary medication for those who need them; keeping a cheerful and calm atmosphere among the residents.

Many of the staff were just changing shifts, those who were scheduled to leave remained to help out; those just coming on sprang into action.

To a wonderful, caring and loving staff I want to congratulate you and thank you for once again showing us you want to keep us safe and well cared for. God bless you all.

RCMP award couple for work in search and rescue

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

In the last 13 years, Peggy and Bob Wigton have seen just about everything — and more.

The two live out near Water Valley have been part of the Didsbury Search and Rescue since its inception in the late '90s.

"It started with just backpacks. We all purchased and drove our own vehicles," said Peggy, remembering the early days. Over the years, the group has built itself up and has a truck and van, and a training camp outside of Water Valley.

"I'm so proud of how far we've come," she said.

The two stepped down last fall but have still been involved in search and rescue efforts in any way they can. The Didsbury RCMP will be honouring them for their service in the coming weeks with a commemorative plaque.

"We've volunteered for various community services in the last 30 years and we truly believed there was a need for disaster services. That's why we became involved."

The group, called Didsbury Search and Rescue because of its affiliation with the police detachment, covers areas spreading all around the Didsbury area out into Water Valley and Cremona.

Peggy said she's seen things she never thought she would, including the bombing northwest of Cochrane.

"We went and looked for any debris we could find and any type of evidence. We were also searching for missing people," she said of one event she never thought she'd see in this area. Another big event was the Pine Lake tornado where the crew spent 10 days cleaning up.

"It was really unfortunate. But this is why you need these disaster services resources. People don't think about these things. But what would happen if a flood hits and you have to evacuate the west country? Is that the first time you're going to meet your neighbours?"

She said the rescue members help out collecting evidence, finding missing people, and helping police with big events such as the mass campouts near Fallen Timber during the May long weekend.

"Community involvement is key."

"Put yourself in their situation. If your kid was lost, what would you do? If there was a fire in Didsbury, what would you do if you had to wait for Olds or Calgary? This is a really needed service. Disaster service, you know?"

Although she and her husband are stepping down, she'll never forget what made it all worthwhile.

"The simple thank you. It fills your heart with those simple words. It doesn't matter if you're freezing your buns off. It's that thank you, the human kindness."

Didsbury Horse Show reined in a big crowd over the weekend for the 49th annual event.

"We have 97 horses entered already," said Denise Thompson, chair of Didsbury Horse Show committee, five days before the event. Last year, 90 horses in total entered, up from 60 in 2009. This year, coordinators listed 108. And the weekend event was longer this year, kicking off on Friday night instead of Saturday morning.

"We had jumping this year which was a new event for us," explained Thompson. She said the Jeopardy Challenge, similar to the Calgary Stampede's Cowboy Up contest usually runs Saturday but was bumped to Friday night so they could run the jumping contest.

Jeopardy Challenge has contestants taking their horses through a variety of obstacles and getting them to do things they normally wouldn't be comfortable with. The goal is to complete the obstacles within the quickest amount of time. Top three awards went to Stormy in first place, owned by Craig Grove, Knotty owned by Christa Frickle and Echo Candys Pride owned by Katelyn Carter.

The jumping events ran all day Saturday but in the evening contestants would continue to jump higher heights as far as they could. The winner, went to Kaylee McLauchlin and her horse Amigo. Second place to Jennifer Alliban and horse Bachelor. Third, Allison Gilbert and horse Foothills Lord Charles.

The weekend hosted 116 classes for adults and children to enter. A total of $7,000 was given out in cash prizes with just over $2,000 more in donated prizes.

"This is what you call a schooling show," said Peggy Baker with the horse show committee.

Tayler Hansen leads her horse, Babe, into the ring Saturday afternoon during the Jumper - power and speed class.

"It's structure. It's judged by professionals ... We get a lot of kids because they've never shown before. It's a good place to get over show nerves. After class is over they will tell kids and adults what they did (well) and what they need to work on."

Next year will be the show's 50th anniversary and members said planning is already starting for the big year.

"We're planning a gala award night," said Thompson "There's a lot of long-time volunteers and it'd be great to recognize their work."

Margaret Johnston, who started a scrapbook of old photos and results when the show celebrated its 40th year, said she'd be interested in updating the book with any old memories people may have that they would want to include in the book.

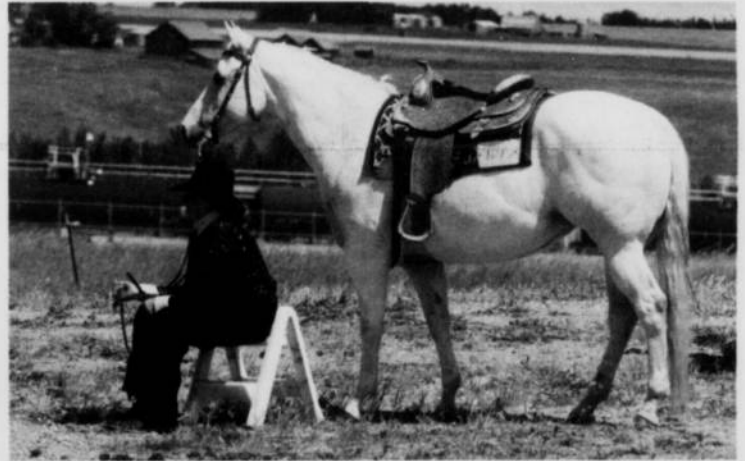

Champion Welsh Pony

was awarded to Ulterra Cascade owned by Kassie Miller-Snyder and Reserve champion Welsh pony to Rhiannon's Lamp Post owned by Jennifer Liddell.

Grand champion reserve went to Dee Jay Jewel owned by Andrea Randle and Poppy's Duelin Chic owned by Bonnie Quance.

Bonnie Quance and her horse, Special Sunny Dee placed first Saturday afternoon in the pony driving course. Quance had to lead her pony around the arena and complete various obstacles.

A woman waits with her horse outside the indoor arena for her event to be called.

Four heading to summer games

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Four athletes from Didsbury will be heading to Fairview July 21 to 24 to compete in the Alberta Summer Games 55 plus.

"I'm a little bit nervous but I've been working on my game trying to keep in shape," said Didsbury's Louise Bruce, competing in the 55 plus group for women's golf. She's been playing for the last 20 years and this will be her first time at the games.

"I heard about it because there was some information at the golf course and my husband went in 2009." She said she's feeling a little bit nervous but is looking forward to the competition.

"I don't want to come in last," she said, laughing and commenting about her competitive streak. She's planning to make a week of the event and head up with her family to camp out.

Bruce is one of four people from Didsbury competing and one of 26 Mountain View County residents, said Adeline Fedyk, publicity director for Zone 2 Big Country Seniors Sports Society.

"There's 126 people in Zone 2 competing," she said, in various sports events. The Alberta Games 55 plus has 32 different sports activities; half run in the winter, the other half in the summer, she explained.

Zone playoffs ran from April until June 15 to determine who would represent each zone.

She lives west of Didsbury and will be competing with her husband Bill and a couple from Carstairs in Bocce. This isn't their first time competing.

The two went to Fort McMurray in 2003 and won gold for bocce. They were also invited to the Canada Games in 2004, winning gold as well. They won silver in the 2005 summer games and in 2009 Adeline competed in cycling and placed first.

The two have been practising twice a week, at one of the only places in the area where bocce lanes are available, she explained.

Bocce is played on a grass court 13 feet wide by 60 feet long and is similar to lawn bowling, but the ball runs straight and doesn't have a bias.

Because the summer games only run every two years, Fedyk is hoping to set up tournaments in Strathmore or Sundre to get people involved during the off years.

Louis Pride of Didsbury was also picked for the summer games. He'll be playing slo-pitch.

Boy raising money for homelessness

BY PAUL FREY
Review Staff

Seeing the plight of the homeless, one nine-year-old Olds boy has taken it upon himself to help in whatever small way he can. Zephaniah Thompson will be walking from Olds to Didsbury raising money and awareness about homelessness on July 20.

Thompson said he got the idea to walk from Olds to Didsbury to raise money and awareness about homelessness after seeing the people that frequented a shelter where his mother Sarah worked.

"My mom was working at this homeless shelter and so she kind of told me a little bit about homeless people. It was really sad," he said.

"He thought about it in the fall, actually, but it was too cold then to walk," Sarah said.

Zephaniah has been riding his bicycle around town in order to condition himself for the walk.

The money that Zephaniah raises will go toward the Central Alberta AIDS Network Society in Red Deer, which runs a Tune-Up event in Red Deer four times a year, usually with the onset of each season. The event allows homeless people to get haircuts, photo identification, immunizations and other services and supplies. The next event will take place in October.

Nicky Myrhaugen, harm reduction coordinator for the CAANS, and chair of the Tune-Up planning committee, said she was young people," she said.

Donations for Zephaniah's walk will be taken until the end of August. He said the money raised will go toward backpacks, which can be filled with toothpaste and other supplies homeless people would need.

So far, Zephaniah has raised $1,000 from various businesses in town. His goal is $2,000.

Mayor Judy Dahl said she was quite impressed with Zephaniah's story when he approached her at the Canada Day festivities held in Olds.

"My goal would be for some citizens in the town of Olds (to) recognize this boy. He's an amazing leader. It would be great if some people could support him," she said.

Anyone wanting to pledge can phone Sarah at (403) 586-1464.

Man charged for mischief and theft

A 35-year-old man was arrested last week for mischief to a vehicle and theft under $5,000. Two weeks ago, a string of trucks in Carstairs were broken into and several items were stolen from glove compartments, centre consoles and sides of vehicles. A complainant witnessed a man driving away and upon further investigation, police contacted the man in Wimborne and asked him to come to the Didsbury detachment for questioning. He arrived Sunday and was held until Monday when he appeared at Didsbury Provincial court. His bail was set at $500 and he was released. His charges stem from one vehicle break-in but investigation is ongoing related to other break-ins.

Graffitiist leave phallic imagery

A large orange phallus was spray-painted onto a driveway on Co-op Road, in the industrial park of Didsbury. The complainant advised police that the newly asphalted drive was spray-painted on the west side sometime overnight July 3 and the early morning hours of July 4. No suspects or witnesses were observed and police are encouraging anyone with knowledge of spray painting or graffiti in the area to come forward and advise police.

Fireworks start fire

Fireworks were lit and tossed from the window of a dark car along Highway 22 near Cremona causing a brush fire. This occurred at 1 in the afternoon July 6. The vehicle was described as a dark car. Cremona Fire Department was dispatched and put out the fire. Police said the person, who left the scene, could face charges of stunting under the safety act as well as provincial charges for causing a fire.

Phone scam

Reports of a phone scam have been coming into the detachment in the last week. Complainants say they have been receiving calls from people looking to sell virus protection for computers, pressuring callers to download the supposed protection. One person followed through and wrecked their computer. Police are warning residents to be aware of anyone calling and identifying themselves as some sort of authority. "If they're directing you to provide personal information such as social insurance numbers or banking information, people need to disconnect," said Cpl. Warren Wright.

Campground broken into

A group of people broke into the Water Valley campground sometime over the Canada Day weekend. The camp, closed due to high water, was locked. Parties gained entrance by breaking a lock on the gate into the camp. Police were notified July 2 at 9 p.m. after the group had vacated.

Accused Sundre shooter preliminary hearing delayed

BY DAN SINGLETON
Review Staff

The preliminary hearing for a 60-year-old Sundre woman charged with second degree murder after her husband was shot and killed on the couple's Sundre area property in December has been delayed.

Heather Wilson Duncan, 60, faces a charge of second-degree murder in the shooting death of Alexander Duncan, 68.

Responding to a 911 call placed by the accused, police found Alexander Duncan dead in the couple's rural home on Dec. 10. The accused was arrested at the scene and charged the next day.

She has been released on $25,000 bail. Her two-day preliminary hearing had been scheduled for November.

However, in Didsbury provincial court on Monday, Judge George Gaschner agreed to a joint request from defence lawyer Greg Dunn and the Crown for the hearing to be delayed until March.

Dunn told the judge the delay is needed because the medical examiner's report has not yet been released and that the two days scheduled for the hearing was not now believed to be enough time.

The inquiry will now be held over three days, starting March 13, 2012.

Preliminary hearings are held to determine if there is enough evidence to send an accused to trial.

Outside court, Dunn said his client is keen to have her day in court.

"She is anxious to get on with this," said Dunn. "She would have liked to have proceeded in November but this delay couldn't be avoided."

No plea has been entered in the case.

Laura Krebs looks over some fruit at the Didsbury's Farmer Market. The market, started July 1 and will continue every Wednesday night from 5 until 7 until September. "We have a really great group of vendors again this year," said Jean Flett, co-ordinator with Didsbury Farmers market. "We have a fruit and veggie truck from B.C.; vegetables and baking from the Sandhills Huttenite colony; local growers and bakers with treats and breads; as well as local artisans with crafts and jewellery."

Rahn, Clifford 1934-2011

Clifford (Cliff) William Rahn, age 77, passed away at his home in Didsbury, Alberta on Saturday, June 18, 2011 following a difficult battle with cancer. Cliff was born January 29, 1934 in Winnipeg, MB to Wilhelm and Lydia Rahn. He attended Pinkham Elementary School where he excelled in art and academics and then Faraday Junior High. The family moved to Vancouver, BC in the fall of 1949 where he attended John Oliver High School and sang in the Grace Evangelical Church choir. It was at this time that he gave his life to Christ and went on to attend Hillcrest Christian College, Medicine Hat, AB in 1956 to 1958. While attending Hillcrest he met Dolores Besler and they were married on Aug 29, 1958. Cliff's strong desire to become an ordained minister led them to Portland, Oregon in 1961 so Cliff could attend Cascade College. Upon graduation from Cascade in 1963 he received his first pastoral position in Leader, SK where Cliff was the pastor of the Evangelical Church. He later pastored in Castor and Vulcan, AB with his last pastoral position in Didsbury, AB with the Didsbury Evangelical Church from 1976 to 1982. Upon retiring from the ministry Cliff continued to worship his Lord and Saviour while truck driving with Alberta Starline Trucking and then Christensen Carriers until his diagnosis in 2010. As a child Cliff enjoyed spending time on his Uncle Bill's farm always eager to lend a hand or just have fun with his cousins. He had many fond memories singing in the Shepard's Voices. During his later years he spent many hours with his grandchildren and could be regularly found downstairs in yet another floor hockey match with one of them. Cliff is lovingly remembered and deeply missed by his wife Dolores, his children Carl (Brenda) Rahn and Calvin (Cindy) Rahn, his grandchildren Zachary, Joseph, Andrew and Lucas Rahn, his sister Lenora (Bud) Farris of Austin, Texas, his brother Wes (Adina) Rahn of Vancouver, BC and his Aunt Adeline (Wayne) Scheer of Calgary, AB. Also left to cherish warm memories of Cliff are many loved cousins, nephews, nieces and friends. A private interment was held at the Didsbury Cemetery prior to his Memorial Service at 2:00 pm on Tuesday, June 28, 2011 at the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church with Pastor Mike Morgan officiating.
